The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

It has been noted by many authors that nurses comprise the largest percentage of health care providers in the United States. At various times in the history of the profession, nursing shortages have existed due to a variety of factors. This paper will not only provide a description of nursing shortages in the past, but it also discusses the current nursing shortage in the United States. This paper uses research by means of literary analysis on the topic of the United States nursing shortage and there were no gaps identified in the literature review. First, a brief history of nursing shortages is provided. Contributing factors to the shortage such as retiring baby boomers, decreased numbers of nursing faculty, and an expansion in nurse workloads are examined. Several solutions to combat the shortage were discovered in the literature review. Retaining aging nurses, increasing faculty and student enrollments in nursing programs, and ways to reduce nurse burnout are investigated. Nurses need to promote nursing as a profession to students as a potential career choice. Future projections of the nursing shortage across the United States will necessitate innovative solutions to address this far-reaching problem.

Like the country at large, the Army has been challenged by a national imbalance between the supply of professional nurses and the demand for their services. This shortage, known as the nursing shortage, poses special problems for the Army Medical Department as it strives to maintain wartime readiness and provide comprehensive peacetime care to Department of Defense beneficiaries. History demonstrates that the present nursing shortage is different from past ones in that it has been caused by a host of emerging trends in health care and society at large. Unlike past shortages, experts believe there are no 'quick fixes' to the present, persistent shortages of nurses. Instead, it will require reforms that address a whole series of basic underlying problems. Still, classic studies have demonstrated attributes of magnet hospitals and characteristics of the nursing profession that provide clues to resolving, or at least ameliorating, the nursing shortage for the Army. This paper reviews the national nursing shortage and the history of shortages of nurses to meet Army needs. It examines strategies the Army Nurse Corps has used to correct imbalances in nurse compensation and improve its ability to successfully compete with the civilian labor market for nurses. It draws upon the classic studies and critiques the Army for failing to incorporate lessons learned in devising successful strategies for recruiting and retaining nurses. Finally, it introduces early findings of the Army Nurse Corps Proud to Care Survey and uses them to formulate the author's view of elements that should form the basis for a strategic restructuring of the role, function and organization of Army nursing.

...an important book...a wake-up call... -Bookviews.comAt 6:30 A.M. a head nurse reviews room assignments and the day's challenges ahead: twenty-nine patients, most of them seriously ill, and four nurses to care for them. That means a barely manageable and potentially risky patient-nurse ratio of seven to one, with one nurse taking eight patients. Unfortunately, this dismal scenario is played out again and again in hospitals across the country.This in-depth, behind-the-scene's account of a healthcare system under stress and the declining quality of medical treatment in America should serve as a wakeup call to the public. Faye Satterly, a Registered Nurse with over two decades of experience, spells out the alarming statistics: The average nurse today is forty-five years old and anticipating retirement. Only 12 percent of nurses are under age thirty. At the same time, nursing schools report decreasing enrollments and fewer graduates. The result is that the nurses who are on the front lines of healthcare are feeling overwhelmed and leaving the field for less stressful opportunities outside hospital settings.Compounding the looming crisis is the fact that just as nurses are becoming scarce, the need for them is becoming ever greater. Over the next decade, aging baby boomers will swell the ranks of the over-fifty-five population, a group that experiences higher healthcare needs than those in their thirties and forties.There are answers, the author insists, but they will require an honest public debate about our choices and expectations. What are we willing to do and how much are we willing to pay for safe, effective delivery of healthcare?This fascinating and disturbing account by a veteran nurse with extensive experience is a compelling call for action to counter the nursing shortage and ensure that caring regains its premium status in healthcare.Faye Satterly, R.N. (Charlottesville, VA), is Cancer Services Director at Martha Jefferson Hospital. She has been a Registered Nurse for twenty years, and served as Cancer Services Director for twelve years.
